

Wainscott Weekly

This week was very productive. The children have been working very hard in their studies and we have all settled into the daily routines. I have been really impressed with their eagerness to learn new things. I have been sharing our daily activities as best I can using classroom dojo. In reading and math the kids have been studying comparing and contrasting as well as place value and addition. Next week we will continue with these lessons and build on them. During Social Studies we have begun to talk about being a responsible citizen and the voting process. We will have our own vote in the near future. Science has been a lot of fun with inquiry and observation. The students had a chance to observe items from around our classroom using various tools that scientists use. They had a great time with it. Next Monday we will start the week with our first field trip to the Morton Wildlife preserve in Noyac. We plan on stopping at the wharf in Sag Harbor on the way back to have lunch so please remember to have the children bring in a bag lunch. Hope you all have a great weekend, and a happy fall season!

It has been a great week of learning. The students have become comfortable with the routine and procedures. The Kindergarteners have worked with the letters M and S as well as sight words "the, to, like, here, can, see, me". It is important that they practice these words daily. I have also sent home little readers to reinforce the sight words. Please read each night and return the book in the bag on Friday. In math we worked with identifying, naming and writing numbers 0-5. The first graders read a nice story about what it means to be a pal. They explored the story to identify common nouns as well as finding them within the classroom. In math we worked with addition facts and missing addends. In Science we explored seasons and will continue to work with weather. In Social Studies we discussed community laws and their importance. Remember Monday is our field trip to Morton wildlife. Please pack a brown bag snack, lunch and drinks. Please dress appropriately with sweaters and sneakers.

Thank you! Have a great weekend!
